Sing 'n Learn Chinese: Introduce Chinese With Favorite Children's Songs = Chang Ko Hsueh Chung Wen

Synopsis

This book and cassette introduces Mandarin Chinese to children the fun and natural way using many familiar melodies as well as native children's songs from China. Children will enjoy learning basic vocabulary and pronunciation through popular themes such as greetings, numbers, family, animals, weather, colors and more. The song book contains illustrations featuring Penny and Tommy Panda while the digitally recorded cassette has 22 vocals in Chinese on one side and music only on the other. The book also includes English translations, pronunciation guide, suggested activities and instructional guides. The Sing 'n Learn Chinese is the first of its kind to be released in the United States and it is also in use in China. The 23-minute digitally recorded tapes have a slightly slow tempo to allow for clear enunciation. It is also the only title with the lyrics in both traditional and simplified characters and romanized pinyin pronunciation system. No prior knowledge of Chinese is necessary!

I use this book with my kindergarten students. It gives the Chinese words for several popular children's songs including London Bridge is Falling Down, Mary Had a Little Lamb, and Twinkle Twinkle Little Star. The kids learn the song in both English and Chinese, making it easy to understand the Chinese. It also has some "classic" Chinese children's songs, including Liang Zhi Laohu and Mi Feng Gong Zuo. The tape is clear and easy to understand, so that even teachers who don't speak Chinese can learn the songs. I recommend it highly for children from preschool through fifth grade!

I bought this tape expecting that there would be children singing these songs (I don't know what prompted me to think that); instead it's an adult woman with a rather high voice. My 3 year old son has only listened to the tape once because I found the music and singing a little grating the first time we heard it. Also, I think that the songs are sung a little too fast for beginners, even though I am a Chinese speaker and can understand what's being said. I may just need to play it hundreds of times, as I do most of my son's music tapes, for him to learn the words.

these song are great, my daughters not only learn the chinese language but also the english version of these songs. This item is used at our play group and the children love this tape. the tape is music and words are clear each word can be understood it is a must.
